MR. MORGAN'S FINAL PLEA

He Concludes His Speech Urging Treaty Abrogation.

A Charge That Lobbyists Have Defeated Action on the Isthmian Canni Question-The Right to Make Agreements With Other Powers.

the close of his two days' speech advocating his resolution providing for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty in order to pat : the way for the passage of the Nicaragua Canal bill Mr. Morgan gave notice that he would make no fur-ther specches on this subject. He was almost pathetic in reciting the reasons which impelled him to keep the question constantly before the Senate and said that he did not now hope to live to see the canal in operation. His chief motive for urging the subject upon Congress in season and out is, he said, in addition to his desire to bring a great and lasting good to the United States, the fact that it would directly benefit the South, whose industries and prosperity have not yet recovered from the effects of the civil war that covered that unhappy section of the country with

Mr. Morgan was somewhat affected in delivering his valed ctory and his col-leagues on both sides of the chamber were forced to admire the unwavering devetion which he has shown to the cause in which he is so deeply interested.

A vote on the resolution was prevented by Mr. Lodge, who moved that the Senste go into executive session.

Mr. Morgan said, in resuming his ar gument, that the Clayton-Bulwer Treaty one never in actual effect and that Gree Britain had never dared to get behind it for protection. He ther drew a parallel between the right of the President to make a treaty with Costa Rica and Nicaragon and his right to act as he has done in China

"What right has the President to en ter into a treaty with other Powers?" said Mr. Morgan, "to take the lives of many men without coming to the Senate for ratification? If he could do this he can make a treaty with these two little Republies. If he cannot do it he should impeached. There is no argument further than this.

"The President has already made contracts with Costa Rica and Nicaragua. Will this body vote to break his solemn word? The vote on the resolution will show the attitude of this body toward the canal. It will show whether we will cringe to Great Britain or demand our sovereign nation. "I am glad to see that the chair has today been occupied by a man who knows the truth of my statements" (Mr. Money), said Mr. Morgan. 'He has voted for such a resolution as I offer, and he will do so

Roosevelt, who was then in the chair, called Mr. Burrows and questioned him as to Mr. Morgan's meaning. He seemed to be dissatisfied with the reply and listened to the speaker attentively 'I am making my last appeal for the canal," continued Mr. Morgan. " I have worked for it for years and have been unable to get the assistance of Congress."

Mr. Morgan predicted such a strife be tween the East and the West as had taken place between the North and the Fouth. He showed the danger of the United States in case of war with any foreign Power, when without the canal vessels of the navy would have to be sent around Cape Horn to reach the Pacific, The secret rubbershod lobbylst is in the corridors of this building," said he 'The criticols have put up money, Com-binations in politics and capital have been set on foot. These are all fighting the canal and causing good men to against it. I want a yea and nay to see who the friends of the canal are and who are against it." When Mr. Morgan concluded, Mr. Lodge moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. Roosevelt seemed worried. He looked from Mr. Morgan to Mr. Lodge and timilly said "What disposition does the Senator from Alabama want made of the worth considering. I imagine it is all a sailors tale.

"Capt. W. C. De Hart is in command of the Onondaga and he has the reputation of being one of the kindest of officers. The same is true of First Lautenant Reed, who, it is probable, might have been in command at the time this disturbance, whatever it may have been, took place. Deserters are common enough, and they are to be expected when a ship is in port, for the crews are made up of coasting ship sailors. I do not put any faith in the statements of bad treatment. who afterward killed himself, will probably recover. She is in the hospital with the bullet still in her head, but the physicians say it is lodged in the temporal bone behind the left car and that there is no need of removing it until the patient recovers from the shock.

Miss Truelib, who has been conscious ever since the shooting, was told this afternoon of Campbell's death at the hospital at 2 o'clock this morning. She said: "It is too bad. He was a foolish boy, Why, I never gave him one bit of encouragement to think I cared for him any more than as a friend."

There is no longer any doubt that Campbell's left in love with his young teacher while she was giving him violin lessons. He was so infatuated that he was at her home nearly every night and he hever missed an opportunity to walk home with her when he met her on the street. He chided her about a letter she had received from Boston and which he suspected was written by a rival. She replied that she had become tired of having him follow her around and would prefer to go home by herself. This is believed to have confirmed Campbell's suspicions of a rival and made him so insancity jealous that he wayfield her and after trying to kill her took his own life.

Stop a Fight.

What might have turned out to be murderous anray was only averted by the promptness of the Second precinc patrol wagon under Patrolman Cooper who carried Frank Norman, forty-five years old, colored, to the Homeopathic Hospital, suffering from a terrible wound in the back of his neck, inflicted by a knife in the hands of Jack Tutt, colored, twenty-nine years old.

Norman was hurt while he was engag ed in a fight with Tutt last night on the tional Guardsman, while confined in a cell at the First precinct station, charged with intoxication, will result in an autopsy this morning on the remains at the morgue. Apparently under the influence of liquor, Harrington was found lying in an afley near Thirteenth and D Streets northwest early yesterday morning, taken to the police station, and locked up.

Two soldiers discovered Harrington in a serious condition and conveyed him to the station, suggesting that a physician becalled to sitend him, but no such action was taken and the prisoner died in a cell unattended. No word of his death was sent to his parents in this city, who only learned last night of the death of their son by the reports in the newspapers. James Harrington, father of the death of youth, visited the morgue last night in an effort to learn the facts surrounding the death of his son. Funeral arrangements will depend largely on the result of action today by Coroner Nevitt.

John Chamberlain, a member of the District National Guard, accompanied by a friend, were walking in the altey near Thirteenth Street at 3 o'clock yesterday morning, when they saw Harrington lying on the ground, apparently unconscious. They picked him up and removed him to the station, more dead than alive, where he was turned over to Petrolmann Houghlan and Policeman Emmert. At first a call was sent in for the ambulance, because it was thought Harrington was in a serious condition, but the call was countermanded. Harrington was the condition and the proposed and the interest of his in the latest of his facts of the death of his part and the fertile proposed and the injured man was raised from the pavement bleeding profusely from the pavement bl corner of Seventh and P Streets north cell at the First precinct station, charged west.
